Excerpt: . . . to be understood as indicating any preference whatever, but in case he VII. Porto Rico--27. Welch and Co. v. Central San Cristobal. should, that he also report what reduction in receivership elipenses would be feasible. The receiver would not be personally managing the property, and, as in other eases, there might possibly be some reduction of the expenses. This is not intimating in the least any preference between the two propositions 3. I think that is all I need to say except possibly one tiling in conclusion, that is perhaps rather a personal matter. Certain cable messages were sent to the judge in regard to 1111859 matters by parties in interest, although represented by counsel. I do not question that it was done in good faith, but I trust all of you will caution your clients against that. The court kl15 only the...
