Reviews

This publication is indeed gripping and intriguing. It is actually written in basic terms and not difficult to understand. I am just pleased to explain how here is the greatest publication we have read through during my own lifestyle and could be the best pdf for at any time.

Where a cyanide is added to a silver solution, there is formed a precipitate of silver cyanide, very similar to the chloride of silver. On further addition, however, the precipitate first formed is dissolved, by the formation of a double salt, and it is this double salt that exists in the plating bath. We take advantage of this fact in testing cyanide salts. To examine cyanide (Na or K) break up several large lumps and select a few pieces from the centre o-f each. Sodium cyanide has a molecular weight of 49 and silver nitrate 170. Therefore, if we take 4.9 grammes of the salt to be tested, and 17 grammes of the AgNOj--making of each a 1,000 c.c. solution; each c.c. of one will equal the same amount of the other, provided both are perfectly pure. In this particular case, however, we must bear in mind that the Ag will unite with the CN to form a double salt, before the end point is reached, according to the following formula: --AgNOa+2NaCN= 170 98 AgCNaCN+NaNO, N Therefore, each c.c. of--solution 10 of AgNO, will equal.0098 of NaCN. We now take one gram of the salt to be tested and dissolve it in 100 c.c. of water.-10 c.c. of this is placed in a beaker and diluted with water. If Fig. 3.
